2014 Annual Report

Mission:

To provide an opportunity for women leaving prison to live and work on a farm where they grow food, nourish self, and foster community.

Vision: To create a more equitable, just, and nurturing world for women and the communities they transform.

Letter from the Founder & Executive Director

Benevolent Friends & Family,

Wow. 2014 was truly magical for Benevolence Farm. We were beside ourselves when we received 11 acres of land at the close of 2013. Little did we know on that brisk but lovely January day when we gathered to bless the land that we would soon be the proud stewards of a newly renovated brick house, a 985 square foot pole barn, and two more acres!

The sturdy three bedroom house on two beautiful acres made itself known to us in early February and by mid-April it was ours, thanks to the shared vision and generous support of the Snider Family Charitable Fund. Soon thereafter I had coffee with the uber talented architect Randy Lanou, which resulted in an invitation to partner with NCSU's School of Architecture Summer Design/Build Studio. These 18 tenacious students created a state of the art pole barn, complete with skylight and loft space in just 10 weeks. Simply astounding.

We are truly fortunate to have so many wonderful people along on this journey. Witnessing the magic with us while extending encouragement, hope and continued inspiration as we dare to offer something different to women returning from prison: a chance to thrive.

Benevolence Farm clearly attracts the most amazing, generous and kind-hearted people. And in 2014, we were perpetually humbled and delighted by the numerous community groups and volunteers who showed up on days cold and hot, rainy or not, to help us get the farm rolling and the house warmed up. Carefully shepherded by our full time Volunteer & Outreach Coordinator, Lindsey Paydon, our volunteers continue to be the backbone of this pioneering program. Lindsey joined us in September thanks to Volunteers in Service to America (VISTA) ~ yet another serendipitous gift that arrived right on time.

We also welcomed a part-time Fundraising and Administrative Assistant as well as our fabulous Farm Manager Matt Ballard in 2014. Along with strong farming experience, Matt boasts dual degrees of Masters in Social Work as well as Divinity and has worked tirelessly to bring a functional and expertly designed farm operation into being.

Benevolence Farm has also benefitted from strengthening and solidifying numerous valuable community partnerships this past year. Organizations such as the United Way of Alamance County, Alamance Community College, Allied Churches, Vocational Rehabilitation Services, and the Women's Resource Center in Alamance County have all mentored and motivated us, while helping us to build a network of support and services for the future residents of Benevolence Farm and all of the women who are returning to our community from prison. We are grateful to be part of such a caring, compassionate and giving community!

And yet, as we celebrate the miraculous progress we have made, we hold our focus on the women who are leaving prison every day who have successfully completed their sentences and need an opportunity to move beyond their past mistakes. So we continue to move all of the pieces carefully into place, ever more aware of the sustained and deliberate effort it takes to germinate even the smallest of seeds.

Benevolence Farm is firmly planted in rich soil and the sun is shining brightly. Now we need the sustained and deliberate support of our community to hire the necessary staff to oversee day-to-day operations and implement the comprehensive programming we have carefully developed with the guidance of our special advisors - who themselves have experienced the crippling challenges of returning from prison without support. We are sincerely grateful for all of the fabulous help we have received AND we need you now more than ever to set Benevolence Farm in motion ~ Your support is critical to enable us to start providing employment and housing to women who are eager to move in and MOVE ON with their lives.

P.S.

I often recall talking with one of our most valued advisors, Darla. She expressed several times during our conversation that she doesn't want any other women to have to go through the extreme difficulties she has experienced and how happy she is that Benevolence Farm will be a place where women can tell the truth about who they are and feel proud of what they'll be able to accomplish given the chance. I invite you to join us in creating that place.

Land Blessing 1/12/14

The Numbers

Average cost of an adult incarcerated in NC:

$75.54 /day
$2,298 /month
$27,572 /year

Average cost of transitional living programs in US:

$43.33 /day
$1,300 /month
$15,600 /year

There is currently a $300 billion market for natural, organic, sustainable, and socially responsible products and services

Put these together and you can see how beneficial Benevolence Farm will be for all of North Carolina!

The Plan

Benevolence Farm will offer housing, employment, life skills, career development, and nutritious food to women recently released from North Carolina prisons while providing naturally grown, local food to the community.

As a farm enterprise, Benevolence Farm will ground women in the healthful and healing power of nature and community while bringing together the critical resources and skills necessary for success.

We will provide a 6 to 24 month transitional living program based on a working farm for up to 4 women initially and, eventually, 12 women.

Residents will contribute to the operations of the farm, essentially paying part of their own expenses. Activities include growing their own food, labor contribution to the farm, sale of harvests at local farmers markets, grocers, and eventually sales to restaurants. A portion of our harvests will be provided to low-income communities through partnerships with food banks and churches.

The Need

2,698 women were released from NC prisons in 2014

Of those: 50 were residents of Alamance County, 48 of Durham, 116 of Guilford, 7 of Orange, and 162 of Wake

Upwards of 40% of women released in a given month will have 'questionable home plans' – meaning they do not have a definite, stable place to go.

Approximately 60% of women released from prison are re-arrested; nearly 1/3 return to prison within 3 years mostly due to technical violations, caused by unmet "survival needs" such as: unable to meet financial obligations, lower employment skills, and/or inability to secure safe housing.

No program in North Carolina offers housing, life-skills, and the comprehensive, gender-specific, trauma-informed programming proven to significantly reduce the likelihood of women returning to prison.

The Audio Documentary Project

Since partnering with UNC's Center for Study of the American South in 2012, Benevolence Farm has been collecting and sharing the stories of women who have served time in the NC prison system. We continue to gather, share, and — most importantly — to learn from and apply what we are hearing from these inspiring women who offer their experiences as a way to help and advocate for others.

"Eight years ago when I was released, I had nowhere to live and no place to turn for support. Today, women like me (will) have that place - with outstretched arms, Benevolence Farm offers women exactly what they need: regular work that improves their skills, access to community resources, and a safe place to sleep at night. Although I am still transitioning today, my work with Benevolence Farm has brought me closer than ever to setting aside the 'scarlet letter' and starting a new life."
