

Benevolence Farm

WHERE SECOND CHANCES GROW NATURALLY

RESIDENT APPLICATION

Thank you for your interest in Benevolence Farm! We are excited to begin our relationship with you as part of your reentry support network. Before you begin, please look over the FAQs below.

If you have any questions that aren't answered here, please reach out to our staff (info@benevolencefarm.org or 336-639-8436) for more information.

1. How long does the application process take?

Once you submit your application, staff logs it in our database. When you are 90 days or less from release, staff will contact you and/or your case manager to set up a phone interview. After the interview, we will send you a physical letter and email your case manager notifying you whether you have been accepted. We highly suggest submitting your application at least five months before your release date.

2. What is expected of me to apply and be a resident?

Please complete the written application fully and honestly, and be sure to include a reliable contact method/person (it can be a case manager, friend, family member, etc). Our residents must be willing to participate in all programmatic activities, and be able to work 24 hours a week on our farm. Depending on the season, employment may mean working outside in the garden or creating body care products and candles infused with herbs and flowers. Residents must also be passionate about creating a safe and inclusive environment for people of all backgrounds and identities (including people of color, members of the LGBTQIA+ community, transwomen, and women of all other backgrounds).

3. Is Benevolence Farm a recovery/rehabilitation program?

We are not a licensed recovery or rehabilitation program, nor are we able to provide direct clinical mental or physical health support. We are solely a reentry program and cannot support residents who need clinical recovery or rehabilitation support.

Should you need to enter detox, rehab, or more structured clinical care outside of incarceration, we can discuss options for after the completion of that program.

4. What is the difference between your two housing locations?

Our Farm House is located in Graham (Alamance County) and offers both housing and employment on 13-acres in the rural part of our community. This option has more structure and is often the best choice for women who are just leaving prison. Our 307 House in downtown Burlington (Alamance County) offers housing, but not employment. Residents living at the 307 House must arrange their own transportation, which means either obtaining a car, riding the bus, or arranging rides with a service. Residents at the 307 House have 30 days from the beginning of their residency to find employment in the community. The 307 House is a good fit for people who feel slightly more secure in their reentry at the time of their application, and are looking for a structured reentry environment that provides more independence than the Farm House. Applicants with a history of substance use are not eligible for initial residency at the 307 House, but may be considered for the Farm House if just leaving prison or jail.

6. Do you accept people of all conviction types?

Yes, both locations are open to people of all conviction types and lengths of incarceration.

7. What happens if I am not accepted into the program/waitlisted?

If you are denied acceptance into our program or waitlisted for any reason, we encourage you to maintain contact with the organization so we can assist you with resource matching or referrals. If you want to check the status of your waitlist position at any point, you can contact us at info@benevolencefarm.org or call/text us at 336-639-8436.

What are your goals regarding your history of drug and/or alcohol use?

Benevolence Farm is a recovery program where alcohol and drugs are not allowed on the property. We hope to incorporate harm reduction and will hold space for individuals who are navigating their recovery journey, while protecting the physical and emotional safety of other residents. This may look like temporarily connecting a resident who has relapsed with a detox facility, and then creating a Safety Plan with them upon their return to the farm, as opposed to immediate dismissal. We intend to partner with and support all of our residents as they work towards their individual goals, which will include substance use treatment, therapy, and other healing offerings.

Does this match your goals while residing with Benevolence Farm? Please elaborate.
